LITTLE ROCK, AR – During the recently completed 138th Congress of Corrections held in New Orleans, LA (August 8-13, 2008), the Arkansas Board of Parole was reaccredited by the American Correctional Association (ACA). This is a recognition only four (4) other Boards nationally hold. Said Board Chairman Leroy Brownlee, “This certification is not only a testament to the quality of our staff, but it is something the people of Arkansas should be proud of. ACA holds us to the highest standards of professionalism.”

The Arkansas Board of Parole was originally accredited in 2005 and will now remain so until 2011. Other accredited agencies within the state include the Arkansas Department of Correction and the Department of Community Correction.
